

Welcome to Agile Open
The second international unconference on agile development
April 27th and 28th, 2006
Elewijt Center, Mechelen, Belgium

Movements really rise or fall on the strength of on-going social occasions - eXtreme Programming user group meetings, XP Days, Agile 200* conferences, and the Agile Open Conference are the epicenters of the agile movement.

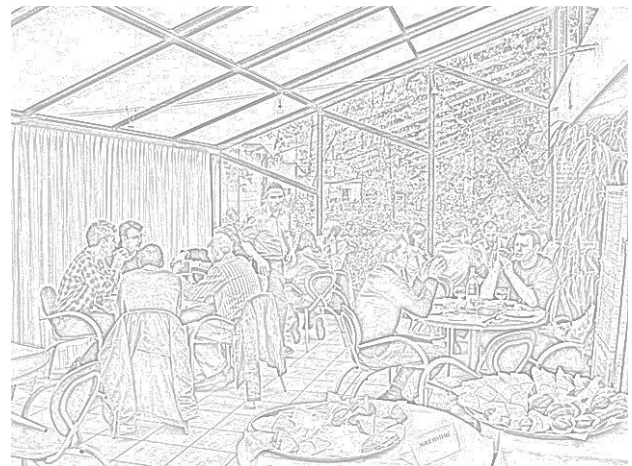

Agile Open 2006 is the second international unconference on agile development. It is an open space intended for software development and business people from all walks of life an amazingly open, warm and lively community space where people spark new insights in and relationships for collaborative (software) development and doing business together.

Agile Open is an unconference - for participants, by participants: we determine the actual program together at each day of the conference. We do not expect people to invent all the sessions on the spot, so we encourage you to put your ideas for sessions on the wiki. Any sessions you would like to experience, or hear and see happen, as well as ideas for sessions you would like to organize and facilitate are welcome.

The Conference location is Elewijt Center in Mechelen, Belgium (near Brussels), Europe.

Topics that were covered last year include:

- The Toyota Way
- Balancing Act, Simple Tools for Feedback, Communication and Courage
- The Cynefin model
- Adapting the Planning Game to build secure systems
- How to deal with Velocity
- Agile Tooling
- Project Planning Metrics
- Temperature Reading
- Agile documentation
- XP Game
- Crossing the chasm
- Theory of constraints

This year's topics are again up to you!

Want to find out more? See www.agileopen.net

If you register before April 7th, the conference fee is 145 Euro (excl. VAT).